

CYNGOR CYMUNED TROEDYRAUR COMMUNITY COUNCIL

LOCAL COUNCILS – MEETINGS PROCEDURE

1.0 The Office of the Chairperson

- a. Every council at its annual meeting must elect a chairperson.
- b. The chairperson, if present at a council meeting, must preside. Once elected, they remain as chairperson until their successor is appointed even if this means that they serve over the twelve months. In an election year, even though the chairperson is not re-elected to the incoming council, they remain chairperson until their successor is elected.
- c. A council may but is not required to have, a vice chairperson, who holds office until after the appointment of the succeeding chairperson. In the absence of both chair and vice chairpersons the council must elect a person to preside over that particular meeting.
- d. The person actually presiding at a council meeting in the absence of the chairperson and vice chairperson has all the powers and duties of the chairperson while the meeting lasts.
- e. To preside over a meeting means, to control the conduct of the meeting but only in accordance with the law and the council's Standing Orders. In particular a chairperson must give reasonable opportunity to all members who wish to be heard, allow proper discussion of the subject matter and act impartially.
- f. A ruling by the chairperson cannot be challenged in the council meeting unless a majority of the council vote against them. Any ruling or other action, even if accepted by the council, can be challenged but only after the event through the Courts.
- g. The office of chairperson carries no other rights. In particular a chairperson does not have the right nor can the council them power, to reach decisions or take action on behalf of the council. Their authority is limited to matters of procedure and neither increases nor decreases their rights as a member to speak and vote on the merits of a particular case. A chairperson must always, however, balance their enthusiasm on any particular issue with their duty to appear to be and in fact to be, impartial.
- h. Two particular powers are given to the chairperson by the Local Government Act, 1972 which they are entitled but not required to use:
 - A casting vote where there is an equality of voting on any issue.
 - This gives the chairperson a second vote; they are entitled to use their first vote (as a member of the council) as they think fit even if this produces a tie in the voting which they then break by use of the casting vote. There is no rule of law nor general precedent which determines how the chairperson should use either their original or casting vote – although good sense suggests that a chairman should emphasise their impartiality by ensuring that a borderline issue comes up again for further consideration.
- i. The chairperson of committees and sub committees are also entitle to a casting vote, following the same rules, the power to call a meeting of the council at any time.

1.1 The office of clerk

- a. A council needs to appoint an officer responsible for financial matters and a 'proper officer' to carry out certain duties.
- b. Any officer is an employee of the council; they are responsible to the council and not to the chairperson or any particular group of members. They must carry out all instructions of the council which are within their terms of employment and not contrary to law but cannot be ordered to perform an unlawful act. For example, if they are instructed to make an illegal payment or to call a council meeting without proper notice, it is their duty to draw the attention of the council to any proposed action which they consider unlawful.

1.2 Calling the meeting

Every local council must hold an annual meeting. All councils may hold as many additional meetings as they wish.

- a. Meetings will be held on the first Tuesday of every month at 7.30 p.m. at Coedybryn, Rhydlewys and Ffostrasol village halls respectively.
- b. Meetings are normally convened by the clerk, there are three exceptions:
 - i. where there is a casual vacancy in the office of chairperson the clerk must under the Local Government Act 1972 convene a special meeting;
 - ii. the chairperson may convene a special meeting;
 - iii. any two members may convene a special meeting if the chairperson refuses their request.

iv Notices: A public notice must be put in some conspicuous place in the area by the previous Wednesday. If, however, the day of the meeting changes to e.g. Wednesday then notices should be in place by the previous Thursday.

A summons of the meeting signed by the clerk must also be delivered to or posted to every member of the council as above. The summons must specify the business which it is proposed to transact in such a way that members can identify the matters they will be expected to discuss.

1.3 Drawing up the agenda

- a. This is usually prepared by the clerk in conjunction with the chairperson who between them have practical but not control over the contents.
- b. Items required by law must be included.
- c. All other items must be adequately described.
- d. 'Any other business' is not acceptable as it gives no indication of what might arise.
- e. There is no category of 'urgent business' which is exempt from this rule. Matters which merely arrive too late for inclusion on the agenda must wait for the next meeting. If a decision genuinely must be taken before the next meeting a special meeting must be held.
- f. Where an item is omitted from or inadequately described in the agenda, the council may if they wish, discuss it, but may not make a decision, even to refer it to a committee.
- g. A member has the right to raise in council any matter which is not unlawful.
- h. All items to be placed on the agenda should be examined to see whether the council has legal powers and to consider the financial implications so that, if necessary, professional advice can be taken.

1.4 Standing Order and the conduct of the meeting – Statutory Requirements Local Government Act 1972

- a. Dates of meetings - The Act lays down formula to determine when the statutory Annual and any additional meetings are to be held.
- b. Chairperson – The member actually presiding at a meeting has all the powers and duties of the Chairperson.
- c. Quorum – Three members or one-third of the whole number of the council, whichever is the greater. The quorum is one-third of the whole number of the council, the quorum does not change because of vacant seats, and secondly, that one-third is prescriptive not a minimum and the council may not fix a higher proportion.

1.5 Voting

- a. Voting is to be by show of hands.
- b. On the request of a single member, the clerk must record how members voted on a particular matter.
- c. Chairperson's casting vote. On a vote for the election of a new chairperson the person presiding must give a casting vote to break a tie. If the person presiding is not a member of the incoming council, then they only have a casting vote and no original vote.

1.6 Order of Business

- a. At every annual meeting the first business must be to elect a chairperson. Since the chairperson cannot act as such until they have accepted the position, the second business must be to receive the declaration of acceptance of office.
- b. In an election year the council must fill by co-option any vacancies.
- c. At any meeting where neither the chairperson nor vice chairpersons are present the first business is to appoint a chairperson for the meeting.
Normally declarations of acceptance of office are made at the first meeting of the new council or when a new member first attends. The council may agree to receive declaration at a later, specified date but neither a chairperson nor a member may act as such until the declaration has been made.

1.7 Minutes

- a. The Act requires the chairperson to approve the minutes 'as a correct record' and discussion on this item should be limited strictly to consideration whether the minutes accurately represent what took place at the previous meeting.
- b. 'Matters arising from the minutes' should be a separate item and specified on the agenda.
- c. The minutes to be approved are the minutes of the immediately preceding meeting. Thus the minutes of any meeting, whether annual, special or ordinary must be submitted to the next meeting of the council.
- d. Statutory business: to deal with any matters which the law requires to be dealt with.
- e. The public are, by law, entitled to attend all meetings of the council and its committees unless the council (or committee) pass a resolution to exclude the public from all meetings or even a particular meeting. They may only pass the resolution if, after, consideration, they consider that discussion of a particular item should, in the public interest, take place in private. It is the public interest which is to be considered, not the reputation of the council or the private concerns of members.

- f. A member of the public who wishes to address the council on a non-agenda item must submit a written request outlining the points to be discussed to the council to be discussed at the next available meeting for consideration by the council. If approved the item will be placed on the following month's agenda.
- g. A member of the public who wishes to address the council on an agenda item must adhere to the following conditions:
 - One nominated representative to address for or against a motion
 - Each representative may not discuss for more than 5 minutes on a single agenda item
 - The chairperson has the right to stop any discussion
- h. If a member of the public wishes translation facilities, this needs to be advised to the clerk at least 7 days before the date of the meeting.

1.8 Items for confidential discussion

- a. Items which genuinely justify confidential discussion are rare but include disciplinary proceedings, negotiation of contracts, legal advice in contentious matters. Even where the discussion is properly confidential it does not automatically follow that the decision is. If the council dismiss an officer, that fact though not necessarily the reasons should be made public. Once a contract has been negotiated the name of the successful contractor should be released although the terms of the contract could still be commercially sensitive.
- b. In any case it is essential that the proceedings are minuted. If the matter remains confidential then all background papers should be retained in a confidential file. Unlike principal councils there is no duty to disclose reports or background documents unless these are specifically incorporated in the minutes.

1.9 The Press

The Act requires that the press have reasonable facilities for taking reports. They attend meetings, however, only in their capacity as members of the public. They have no separate right to attend and must leave if the public are excluded.

2.0 Standing Orders and the conduct of the meeting Custom Practice

- a. Notice of Motion. All matters of consequences which are to be put forward for decision by council must come forward as separate items on the council agenda. Business to be transacted at a meeting must be specified in a way that those receiving the agenda can identify the matters which will be expected to discuss.
- b. Any member is entitled to bring a matter forward for discussion at the council meeting by moving a resolution provided that it is neither clearly unlawful nor defamatory. Written notice must be given for an item to be included on the agenda. When this is given neither the chairperson nor the clerk is entitled to refuse to place it on the agenda.
- c. Rules of Debate: Where a proposal has been moved and there are a number of amendments, each amendment must be voted on in the order in which it was proposed: if unsuccessful the original proposal altered if appropriate, must then be put to the vote.
- d. Once a matter has been put to the vote and a decision reached the council cannot, during that meeting, have a further debate or alter that decision. If the decision affects the interests of a third party e.g. the award of a contract, the council's decision can only be altered with the agreement of the third party.

Subject to those two qualifications a council may at any time rescind or alter a decision. A decision cannot be further debated for six months.

2.1 Filling a Vacancy

Where more than two persons are nominated for a position to be filled by the council (e.g. as a representative on another body) the successful person must have an absolute majority votes. Four votes for A, three votes for B, two votes for C and one vote for D does not mean A is elected. The person with the least number of votes must be struck off the list and a fresh vote taken between the remaining candidates until a final vote between the last two candidates.

2.2 To raise a 'point of order'

To raise a 'point of order' is probably the most widely used (and abused) method of interrupting council proceedings. It can only be properly used to draw attention to a breach or potential breach of a S.O. The member should be required to state specifically the S.O. concerned and must not be allowed to make a speech. It is for the chairperson to rule whether a point of order is valid and the action is taken.

2.3 Discussion should not be allowed and the chairperson's ruling is final.

2.4 Disorderly Conduct

The chairperson has the right and the duty to control proceedings and their rulings must be respected. Members of the public who refuse to comply can be removed on the order of the chairperson, although, if possible they should seek the support of the council Members who by their misconduct obstruct the business of the council may be silenced or removed on the initiative of the chairperson but only with the approval of the council. If all else fails the chairperson may, on their own account, suspend or adjourn the meeting. If they do this they must announce when and where the meeting will resume.

2.5 Breach of the law and of custom

- a. Any serious breach of the statutory provisions e.g. failure to give three days notice or where there is not a quorum, makes the meeting void and its decisions of no effect. Anyone acting on those invalid decisions does so without authority and incurs personal liability for any loss to public funds.
- b. A serious breach can be considered as one which comprises the democratic process (such as lack of quorum) rather than a failure to follow administrative rules (e.g. to approve the minutes as the first item business)
- c. For minor infractions of the statutory rules and failure to follow 'custom and practice' there is no specific sanction in the Local Government Act nor can the ombudsman inquire into local council affairs.
- d. The conduct of all local authorities is open to judicial review by the High Court who will consider the manner in which a council has acted although not the merits of any decision it has reached. The courts exercise its discretion and will only consider cases where there is a serious and substantial public interest. It is certainly possible for the High Court to interfere where e.g. a chairperson persistently shows bias and abuses their authority, even if supported by a majority of the council or where the council deliberately and consistently ignores commonly accepted rules.
- e. Experience suggests that a meeting should never be allowed to continue for more than two hours without a break.

2.6 Planning

In exceptional circumstances delegate powers to the clerk and the relevant councillors regarding planning applications that needs attention before the monthly council meeting.

2.7 Web page

2.7.1 The public notices of any council meeting shall be uploaded to the designated area of the council's website according to the same rules as outline in clause 1.2 (vi) of this constitution.

2.7.2 The minutes of the previous meeting shall be published within 14 days of meeting date following a validation process undertaken by the chairperson, vice chairperson and clerk.
